5. Please assess the applicant's ability to contribute to the Data Science for the Public Good Fellowship Program.

Text Response

I am enthusiastic about Simon Heuberger and his future in political science because he combines deep knowledge of political behavior with extremely good technical skills in applied statistics. In fact, he is currently my editorial assistant at the journal Political Analysis doing all of the author replications on their models/data as the last step prior to publication. This is a demanding task and I'm grateful that he has stepped up to it since I asked him in September when I got to American University. This involves replicating highly technical work with a variety of software packages including R, Gauss, Python, C, Stata, and more. He will instantly contribute to your technical environment and will be one of the most expert data scientists you have ever hired in this capacity.

6. How would you describe the applicant's motivation and initiative in pursuing his/her academic and career goals?

Text Response

This is to strongly recommend Simon Heuberger for the Fellowship Program. Simon is a fantastically qualified young scholar on par with students I have worked with at Washington University, University of California–Davis, and the University of Florida, all of which I have placed in tenure-track junior faculty positions. I am currently Mr. Heuberger's dissertation chair in the Department of Government (although on leave at Harvard University this semester). Simon will be enormously successful after graduating whether he pursues an academic or private sector career.
